How useful did you find having a guide on where to place the assembly so far while adding the current step?

Any other comments about your experience using these instructions?

it was very fun lol <3

Would be useful in real life general use

I would be likely to use this over paper instructions tracking had to be forced into position rather than being a guide on position

It felt quite useful after I stopped using the tracking stuff

I often preferred looking past the screen over listing the screen. Names of parts on screen were useful for getting the right part
